Community Health Practicum for Simmons School of Nursing and Health Sciences

The Community Health class offers the opportunity for students to consider population health and analyze how systems, like the health care system, influence access to care.

Course Description: This course provides an overview of theoretical and practical concepts related to community focused health care. The focus of this course is on assisting you in the development of nursing skills necessary to promote the health of communities and populations. You will gain knowledge about communities and population health, health determinants, and epidemiology to assist clients and communities in making choices that promote health and wholeness. There is an emphasis on wellness, prevention, health promotion and health education as well as a focus on populations and their environments as the units of service. Attention is given to awareness of diversity, inclusion, cultural humility and cultural sensitivity. This course offers a beginning strategy for improving the health of the public that can be applied to any health problem in any population at any time. You will be applying the nursing process at the community level: assessment, analysis and action.

The ‘clinical practicum’ will be in a setting where the focus is on population health. It is intended to allow the student to observe a specific community and the health issues encountered within that population.

Outcome for student: Final project is a community assessment with analysis of the following,

1. Physical environment - such as housing and transportation
2. Population make-up - such as ethnic and racial groups
3. Social organization – such as government, schools and religion
4. Environmental health - such as air and water quality
5. End result: a much clearer perspective on the health of the community and a plan for the prevention of many of the health problems

1. Time requirement: 12 – 14 weeks long, 6 hours per week (84 practicum hours total)
2. Main focus: Community focused health care

A Community Health Practicum preceptor would:

- Focus on a specific population being served in the community
- Hold an active license and BSN degree; an MSN degree or other master’s degree is ideal but not required
- At minimum, have at least 2 years of experience in his/her current role (faculty’s preference is 5 years of experience)
- Be available to host for 6 hours/week for the full term (84 practicum hours total)
- Be willing to serve as a mentor for the student
